AEJMC Council of Affiliates Membership

AEJMC Council of Affiliates membership offers organizations and associations a unique opportunity to work with and get to know journalism and mass communication faculty and administrators. It provides a forum for discussions, cooperation and learning from one another. Together, academia and industry can accomplish much.

AEJMC is more than 2,500 members strong, with members from across the United States and Canada and in international countries. We publish three quarterly research journals, Journalism & Mass Communication Quarterly, Journalism & Mass Communication Educator, and Journalism & Communication Monographs. Founded in 1912, this non-profit, educational association promotes research in the field, and seeks to improve the teaching of journalism and mass communication in an effort to achieve better professional practice, a more informed public and wider human understanding. There is a place for your organization in our Council.

All AEJMC affiliates are recognized in association publications, are involved in Council of Affiliates mailings, and are invited to special conference sessions and to co-sponsor other conference programs with AEJMC divisions. The Council provides the perfect opportunity to be involved in journalism /communication education.
